King and Queen.

Aircraft in mass production was the reassuring sight that greeted the King and Queen when they inspected a famous works in the Home Counties. Germany had a long start but the men and women in the factories have responded wonderfully to every demand Lord Beaverbrook has made. Air supremacy is in sight. It does the workers good to know that like the rest of us the King and Queen appreciate what they're doing.

In her country cottage Mrs. Nicholson learned the exciting news that her Flight-Lieutenant husband had been awarded the V.C. She's married to a hero, she has a baby son, so she's feeling very much on top of the world. The airman's burnt and splinter-riddled uniform tell the tale of as close a shave as man can have. Though Messerschmitt cannon shells set his cockpit on fire he continued the fight. Not till he'd shot his foe down did he bale out. So Flight-Lieutenant Nicholson becomes the first fighter pilot to get the V.C. We took these pictures at Torquay, where he was convalescing.

Flight-Lieutenant Nicholson And may his son be as good a man as his father.
