

RAF STEP UP DAY ATTACKS ON FRENCH TARGETS

Much intensified in the last few weeks has been the daylight ~~bombing~~ precision bombing of isolated, highly important targets in the ~~strategic~~ ^{significant} areas of Northern France. RAF pilots on this work come under fighter command, and their Mosquitoes are to be seen daily going over the English Channel to destroy Nazi outposts in Western Europe.

Towns on the south coast echo the stimulating roar of the outward bound ~~medium bombers~~ ^{aircraft}.

Targets for the day include airfields, railheads, power-stations, most of them demanding bulls-eye bombing.

~~American~~ Bostons are first class planes for this kind of ^{Nazi} ~~work~~ work. Reconnaissance has picked out new/squadrons arrived at French airfields and requiring prompt RAF attention.

~~That's the kind of assignment the Bostons get almost daily:~~

X Dunes
~~The sand dunes of the French coast, as seen by low-flying pilots...~~ Many targets, less obvious than airfields, are hidden in woods, where they have been located by air-photography. Pattern bombing puts paid to them.

The Mitchell bomber is another aircraft used with great effect in this new phase of the air offensive.

Working outside the limelight, these RAF squadrons nevertheless inflict irreparable harm on the Nazi war machine. ~~Perhaps this summer the Allies will reap a great harvest on the field of battle from the seeds of victory sown by the day bombers of the RAF.~~
