

THE PRINCESS NAMES A FORT

Their Majesties, accompanied by the Princess, visited eight air stations - four British and four American - whose men have been ~~hammering~~ attacking the fly-bomb bases. The King held an informal investiture at one of the aerodromes. One of the aims behind the flying bomb was to divert allied aircraft from the Normandy front, but we are so enormously stronger than the Germans that we have 8,000-pounders, bombers and fighters for every purpose of war.

The royal party posed with men who had just returned from the robot bases. The RAF will keep up the attack as long as the Pas De Calais region remains in enemy hands.

(SV) In all operations the RAF works in closest harmony with the American airforce. At a U.S. station Their Majesties were received by Gen. Doolittle, commander of the famous 8th Airforce. Here too were crews recently engaged in war on the doodlebug.

(3 out)

While the king was hearing first hand stories of attacks on the Pas De Calais, bombers flew in from the latest raid. Then Princess Elizabeth christened a Flying Fortress with the name, Rose of York. The ship is the heroine of 13 missions, some to Berlin.

(aft CU) ~~It is perhaps the most significant fact that~~
Anglo-U.S. air-supremacy is positively shattering.

The two airforces have all-but eliminated the Luftwaffe and paved the way to victory.