

STORY 5:

AIR DEATH

A B-24 SHOT DOWN
IN CAROLINES RAID

Described by:
JACKSON BECK

A flight of six B-24s based on Anguar Island in the Carolines, head out on a hazardous daylight mission to Jap-held islands in the Palau group. Air Force cameras follow our planes through layers of overcast as they draw near the target.

Jap positions are erased.

A Liberator is hit.

With one wing completely shattered, the plane plummets groundward. Our Pacific island-warfare is not cheap.

X-34080

Exec G.B. U.S. Fleet X-340000
Bot 13863

SUBJECT SEVEN Our torpedo boats have done a big job in the Pacific, and these pictures will show you just how. Off Borneo, they move in to fire oil wells still in Jap hands. pause thru firing to ls burning) The P-T force find no answering shots as they put the torch to one of the last Nip supplies of oil on Borneo. open 14 ft to column smoke) Small gun fire give the Japs a hot-foot they wont forget when they wonder why they lost the war. open to cu guy shooting) It's a pleasure for the gunners as they deliver everything they have aboard. open to observers) Observers are well satisfied with the results, an attack that cuts off what the japs need most at Borneo. open to boat on way home) Gallant Ladies help carry us to Victory. END.

How 1503.