

RANGERS HOLD DYNAMOS

In the Russians' last match of the tour in Britain they faced Glasgow Rangers. 90,000 took the afternoon off to see whether Scotland stands where she did or whether the unpleasant experience of Cardiff City was to be the fate of Rangers also. The Glasgow heroes were confident they'd pierce the Moscow defence, including that agile and very tough egg, the goal-keeper, Komich. Shaw won the toss for Rangers and the visitors kicked off against a slight wind.

(af crowd) At the start the ball was down at the Russian end, but not for long. Dynamos wasted no time settling down; they put on the pressure and the Rangers' defence realised it was in for a heavy afternoon. Two minutes after the ~~start~~ start ~~kick-off~~ the Russians were awarded a free kick. From 25 yards out Kartsev banged the ball into the ~~corner of the net.~~ net.

~~Williamson~~ Very soon after, Williamson was brought down in the penalty area. Waddell failed with the kick.

For the next 20 minutes the game was hard and fast. Rangers didn't let the one-goal deficit and the missed penalty put them off their stride. They went all out to equalise, but there was worse to come. Inside Right Kartsev beat Dawson again. Dynamos were two up!

Rangers fought back. Five minutes before the interval centre forward Smith scrambled the ball into the net.

It was two-one against the Rangers when play was resumed in the second half.

(after bandage) A quarter of an hour before the final whistle Rangers equalised. Williamson was brought down in the penalty area. This time centre-half Young made no mistake with the kick.
