	Venice, the characteristic Italian lagoon city, is in urgent need of repairs. The foundations of the world renowned "Palasso Ducale" corroded by the sea water are being repaired with great care. To do this work in the best conditions the canal "Rio dei Palassi" has been completely drained. This difficult type of drainage was used for the first time in this undertaking. The San Marco bell tower must also be repaired to avoid a dangerous repetition of something which happened in the past. A little over 50 years ago this bell tower crashed to earth all of a sudden without causing any incidents. This characteristic building was rebuilt "where it was and so it was" with the help of government and private funds. One of the better known monuments was thus given back to Venice.
