

Something new in Dixie. Water bicycling ^{at} ~~in~~ Miami Beach is the latest fad of the holidaymakers. And if the return to prosperity should take the wrong turning, these little ladies can get a job --- errand-girls in Venice. But for the present they do nothing more energetic than fill up with ice-water under the Dixie sun. / What more can you --- Hallo! ~~Here is a bathing beauty gone bad.~~ ^{No} ~~For the moment I thought this was a bathing beauty gone sour.~~ ^{But} it's Mr Schiller of Chicago, the city of chilled meat. B-r-r-r! / He eats ice cream when it's forty below zero; he sits on ice blocks and keeps a cool head. You've only got to look at his chest to see he's a he-man, even if the ~~supply~~ ^{did run} ~~run~~ out before they got to the top. Cold water poured on him turns ^{to} vapour, ~~and a hot mamma turns crazy.~~ Let's go back to Florida and warm up again. Here is a fashion picture from the United States, showing what Miss 1936 wears when fencing, but I don't know if she wears the costume in order to fence or fences in order to wear the costume. But whichever way you look at it it's a pretty dangerous pastime. In the old days a man could kiss and ride away on his horse. Now the only one ~~who~~ ~~to~~ to ride away would be the one who could ride standing up. Here ~~is~~ is a flying mannequin parade. Also from the States ~~As~~ the air liner wings its way ^{South} ~~to Florida~~ it passes over some pretty scenery but it's nothing to what they've got inside. Booking a passage on the beauty air-line has to be done weeks in advance. They even have to have ~~two pilots~~ ^{one} --- ~~one to look out and one to look in.~~ Next week the Gaumont British Chief is going to America on secret business. I don't know his business but I've guessed his secret. ~~two pilots~~ --- it's hard enough for one to keep his mind on his work. Every now and again Film Chiefs go to America on secret business. We may not know the business, but we guess the secret.
