

INDIA.

302

From the Indian jewel of our Empire's crown comes the story of the investiture of the Maharajah Scindia of Gwalior who now takes over absolute ruling powers within his state --- a sovereignty over three and a half millions of the peoples of India¹. His Excellency the Viceroy, Lord Linlithgow, performed the solemn ceremony. The Maharajah has just come of age, and the rule during his minority has been vested in the Regency council. Gwalior is one of the ~~largest~~ largest of the Indian states and the second richest, and the pomp and splendour attending this visit of the viceroy is a fitting representation of the ~~fantastic~~ fantastic wealth of India.

CHOIR.

Sixty schoolboys in Sydney took part in the juvenile choral championship --- and they did it in the wide open spaces of the National Park.

EAGLE.

Escaped from the Zoo, Portuguese Jack had four days and nights of roaming about London before our cameraman located him in St James's Park. Then the Park keeper brought a huge cage which he set up on the ground --- thinking it was about time the eagle went back to his wife at the Zoo. But in spite of temptation with pieces of fish, Portuguese Jack was not ready to be lured back to the arms of Portuguese Jane. From these fine action pictures of the eagle swooping you can appreciate that catching the monarch of the air is no child's play. A lemon sole was his downfall --- Park Keeper Hinton enticed him into the cage and he was taken back home ~~to his wife.~~
