

JULIANA WEDDING.

317

All the thousands of wnthusiastic subjects who flocked to the Hague for the wedding of their Crown Princess stayed up all night to ensure a good place for the morning procession. And the streets were a blaze of light --- cafes remained open to accommodate the homeless and all Holland went gay. The day of the wedding was one of sunshine and splendour. After the civil ceremony at the Town Hall came the religious service at St James's Church. Princess Juliana and the bridegroom, Prince Bernhard zur Lippe Biesterfeld, drove ^{together} ~~back to the palace~~ in a golden coach, preceded by the crack cavalry of Holland. Following was Queen Wilhelmina --- a stately figure in a coach of glass. And through the streets of the Hague -- in a scene typical of Dutch simplicity --- the royal bridal pair rode to the accompaniment of tumultuous cheering.
