

HOUSE COLLAPSE. 359

London --- we called on famous actress Mary Clare and found the neighbours inquiring --- Is there anything wrong? Miss Clare's house in Brunswick Square had collapsed, and five people in it had miraculous escapes. We congratulate them --- and we congratulate ~~our~~ ourselves on still having Miss Clare with us, thanks to the bravery of a young building foreman who pulled her to safety.

PLANE CRASH.

Bilbao --- a different kind of crash --- a French commercial air liner brought down by rebel planes with its fuselage pierced with bullets. Nobody was killed, but the pilot was badly injured and taken to hospital.

HORSE SALE.

New South Wales --- a busy day at the Sydney Yearling Sales. ..
New Zealand <sup>Colts</sup> ~~Colts~~ and Irish chasers in the ~~King~~ auction Ring.

He doesn't look <sup>it</sup> ~~a day's work~~.

CANAL BURST.

Aintree --- when the Leeds and Liverpool Canal burst its banks near Valentine's Brook the Grand National Course was flooded. That's the water jump --- blimey --- you're telling me! It's a lucky thing this didn't happen before the Grand National, but even now it'll take a bit of clearing away. Soop it oop, lad!

VINES v PERRY.

Bournemouth --- Ellsworth Vines met Fred Perry in a professional tennis match on the Dean Court Football Ground. The play doesn't seem to be very breath-taking, but after all we can't all go in for blood-sports. ~~It's a man's world is another man's poison.~~ On this occasion Vines was the winner, so each has now won two matches in this country, which makes it all nice and even and friendly.
