International Motor cycling on the Avus --- one of the newest of the Continental tracks. Speed kings from all countries in Europe took part --- flashing along the straight and round the steep cambered ~~bank~~ banking at 150 miles an hour. At one point this race-track picks up one of the big approaches to the city, ^{like} so the competitors/have to look ~~amixfer~~ week-end drivers.

Also in the news this week --- the Grand Prix in Tripoli --- the first car race of the year in the palm-fringed race track of Northern Africa. It's a contrast of hurtling speed and lazy peace --- the metal monsters of the road racing among those colonial aspidistras. [^]Thousands of people lined the course and thousands cheered as the winners flashed by the flag ~~in~~ to a sizzling victory --- beneath the tropical sun.
