

Down in the Borough Market they're practising for the annual sports --- and it's a busman's holiday. The trick is to keep the baskets balanced, and slow motion shows what happens when they don't. Fortunately we don't record ~~what~~ in slow motion what they say about the baskets. Our cameraman went round on a fruit barrow and he took what you might call a banana's-eye view. When these baskets fall --- as they nearly always do -- it's a lot of trouble picking them up. But some of the porters have them so well trained they go quietly.

In the school for debutantes they teach deportement and walking by the baskets carriers' method. But if a debutante drops a brick she appears to use ^a baskets carriers' expression.
