

WELLESLEY BOMBERS' FLIGHT. 507

A gallant unit of the Royal Air Force left Egypt at dawn to attack the world's non-stop flight record. The machines chosen were three Wellesley Bombers, and the distance they set out to cover was over seven thousand miles. Through endless waves of cloud they flew; their objective Port Darwin, Australia. And here it is; first airport of call, historic landing ground of the first flight to the Commonwealth from the Mother Country.
