OLD COACH.

A gentleman living in Pitsea is very fond of horses and the good old days, so he bought the Paragon coach that used to run between London and Brighton. And it started off with appropriate noises from Pitsea to Southend. But owing to the Road Traffic Act he was not allowed to charge fares, so everyone had to travel free. A girl who heard it was free wanted to go via Canterbury and call on her boy friend; but they wouldn't do that; so she'll have to get a new boy in Southend. So that's the free ride. But it was so cold most of them made the return journey on the bus.
