

GOLDEN GLOVES.

 New York's Madison Square garden ^{was} were packed to the rafters for the finals of the Golden Gloves. See the fireworks of the heavyweights, - Charlie Butch wearing light trunks, and Bob Silverman his opponent. / Butch let go a right that put Silverman on the ropes but the dazed boy was saved from further trouble when the referee stepped into the fray, Tired and dizzy, ~~Silverman~~ Silverman crept along the ropes until ~~the verdict was given~~ and Charlie Butch ^{triumphed} walked over in a one-round knock-out. Here's a fight between two live wires of the light weights., and if you want to see a good ^(his) sock on the jaw, keep your eyes skinned on the boy in dark shorts. Watch his right hand. D'you see stars?

POLO.

 California put into the field the pick of her crack players in a stirring game against a crack team from Hurlingham, and it's polo with a sting in it. The match was played at Monterey Park and is the last before the great International event to be played this summer. Then Britain will try to wrest the coveted Westchester Cup from America. See one of the fastest and most exciting games of polo ever played at this picturesque Californian club. It's a battle between two hard riding teams - whirlwind polo and a mad scramble for the ball. / One of the American team mistook the post for the ball, and down it went, (the post not the ball), and a close victory went to Uncle Sam's team who won by 9-8.
