On the Home Front --- the Royal Air Force are training for ~~the~~ other more strenuous ~~xxxxx~~ duties. ~~M~~ And a smarter body of men it would be hard to find.

After the marching --- there's physical training. This unit picked at random proves that not only in Peace Time Tattoos but on every parade ground, they put up a good show.

Boxing too -- is part of their training. ~~And~~ here they are working under such expert coaches as Len Harvey and Eddie Phillips.

Taking off a few more clothes, they find themselves in the Swimming Pool. If it's exercise you like, there's plenty of it in the R.A.F.

And of course, there's eating. Plenty of that too --- but they don't need training for it.

And in the way of entertainment for the evening, here's a convey of Cinema Equipment supplied by Gaumont British. It's to entertain the R.A.F. at isolated camps throughout the country.

But it's not all fun and games --- here's a course of instruction in how to fly a bomber. ~~All night - let her go!~~

And when you can fly ~~A~~ let fly at the target with all your machine guns.

That's marksmanship --- well done, the R.A.F.
