LUNCH TIME CONCERT. ✓

London has often been accused of indifference to music, but there is none the less an enthusiastic audience to be found at all times for really good music. A new scheme has been set on foot to give lunch-time concerts in the National Gallery, where London regulars and visitors can listen to the old masters, ~~among the~~ ~~side by side~~ in the home of the old masters of a sister art. The artists who gave this rendering of a Cesar Franck Sonata were Kathleen Lang at the piano, and Eda Kersey, violin.
