AMERICAN OPERA SEASON.

American Society flocked to the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, for the opening of the season ~~and the Golden Horseshoe glimmered~~ ~~in the darkened auditorium.~~ In his dressing-room a famous tenor tries a few bars in readiness for the rise of the curtain. An equally famous soprano tests her chords by running a scale- ~~by the time~~ ~~she is finished, she will be running a mile.~~ as far as I know concent she can run In true operatic style the tenor tries out his voice. All the best known and distinguished men and women in New York Society came for this premiere and by the look of things, they are in for a brilliant ~~xxxx~~ performance.
 It's curtain time for the next act- Verdi's opera- Simon Boccanegra- which opens the Metropolitan season.
