NAVAL TRIUMPHS.

Yes --- the Royal Navy is as good as ever. The little ~~submarine~~ ^{launched in 1938} submarine Ursula sailed into the mouth of a Nazi fortified harbour and sank a cruiser protected by six German destroyers. Her gallant commander was Lt-Commander Phillips. Another submarine --- ~~the Salmon~~ ^{and sank a U-boat.} --- ~~sank a U-boat~~ and torpedoed two other cruisers.

Crowning this week of Naval victory was the sinking of the Graf Spee. The pocket battleship took shelter from British cruisers in the neutral harbour of Montevideo. There were rumours that the British force had been strengthened by the arrival of the mighty Frenchman Dunkerque --- this wartime picture shows her still in the white paint of tropical duty. And it was also said ~~that~~ ^{outward} that the ~~battleship~~ ^{outward} Renown and the ~~the~~ ^{the} ~~were~~ ^{there.} ~~there~~ were there. ~~How they got~~ --- ~~and how they got~~ ~~at~~

~~we can answer this famous question of the Nazi Propaganda Ministry~~ ^{where is the Ark Royal?} ~~where is the Ark Royal?~~ ^{where it is today} These are the first pictures ~~of her taken~~ ^{of her taken} since that question was asked. But at the time the Graf Spee ~~sailed~~ ^{sailed} from harbour to its doom, her captain knew that these two great ships were a thousand miles away at Rio. ~~the Graf Spee was scuttled because~~ ^{he really had to face only his original opponents} it had force 3 cruisers ~~and the~~ ^{plus the spirit of the Navy} ~~blow up their great battleship rather than make a fight of it~~ ~~for they also had to face the great spirit of the British Navy~~ ^{plus a commander like} ~~and the command of~~ ^{as} ~~as~~ Sir Henry Harwood.
