

DUNBAR CASTLE SINKING.

This was the fate of the liner Dunbar Castle, outward bound to the Cape with a convoy. She struck a mine off the south east coast and she sank within fifteen minutes. Four lives were lost ~~xxxx~~ The convoy was proceeding upon its appointed course when the terrific explosion occurred --- and now those dramatic moments are brought to the screen from a camera on board one of other ships of the convoy. The mine evidently struck forward --- and you will see how the stricken ship ^{breaks} ~~cracks~~ in two; how the bow comes up where the backbone has cracked and given way.

It speaks volumes for the efficiency of the escort that the death roll was so mercifully small. ~~And British merchant seamen have proved once again that these frightful methods of the Nazis cannot keep them from the sea.~~