

637

B.E.F. REINFORCEMENTS.

Thousands more of the British Army have arrived in France to swell the numbers of the original British Expeditionary Force. France is said to have more than six million men under arms, but Britain amply demonstrates her willingness to share the burden of the war on the Western Front. So these fresh units from Britain have recently landed at various ports in France, to take over from units of our ally. And what a fit and happy band they look ---- well-equipped to maintain tradition in whatever task may befall.

Safely escorted across the sea by the Navy and the Royal Air Force, these battalions once again are only a fraction of the great land force that Great Britain has sent abroad.

Hundreds and thousands of perfectly-trained young men line up on the docks in France --- a most effective sample of the troops that have been secretly disembarking in the past few months. ~~They~~ all look healthy and happy --- another nasty headache for Hitler. So wish them luck --- and a safe return when the job's well done.

Yes - ~~they~~