

U.S. BLIZZARD. ETC.

637

Just by way of a change, let's forget about the war for a while. Let's have a look round America, where the weather is of no interest to a spy. Even in the dear old Southland they've had heavy snowfalls --- there's a layer of icing on the fields of cotton.

It seems that in Florida it's not so hot --- so the bathing belles are getting artificial sunburn. And then they hang them up and cook them to a turn. It's a very delightful picture and it makes you long for peace again; but why do all American bathing beauties look as if they're going to burst?

Move along to Niagara Falls --- ~~this is the~~ spectacle of grandeur ~~that meets the eye~~. The world's most famous waterfall - brought down to the level of a frozen plug-hole.

Chicago takes advantage of the hard weather, and the city fathers have built a six-lane toboggan-slide. So the kids get a five-hundred-footride for nothing.

Now we move along to the big stuff --- Fox River Grove, also in Illinois. It's the rendezvous of the champions for the Norge Ski Club Tournament. There's nothing in the world more graceful than a beautiful leap through space --- come on, champ!

Looks as if all the experts are in Finland.

Here comes the winner --- Torger Tokle. He gets the Prize --- ~~and~~ They couldn't very well give it to anyone else.
