

643

B.E.F. MARCHING.

We mustn't forget the B.E.F. So far in this war the ~~xxxxxx~~ spectacular actions have been shared by the Navy and the Royal Air Force. Well and truly have they earned the praise we have lavished upon them --- but for six months the army has been on the job too. Marching and digging, and doing a thousand and one things that don't sound very much, but form, none the less, a great part of the war effort. Always on guard ; always on the alert; that's the B.E.F. Making sure there are no spies even in an innocent-looking haystack. The army is ready now; it will be ready to meet any call that may be made upon it. But just for the time being, there aren't ~~many~~ very many bright spots.