AUSTRALIAN LIFEGUARDS.

Just for a change these are lifeguards are not soldiers, although they have a uniform almost as dazzling. On St Kilda Beach in Victori: they were the high spot of the Carnival. They marghed past the Governor Committee Bagen --- men and girls whose job it is to look after the safety of swimmers.

They do more than march --- they give a demonstration of lifesaving ---- and when these girls dash to the rescue even the fish start to sink.

Artificial respiration they know from A to Z. The really difficult part of the job comes in when the victims want to go back to the water and be saved again.

Yes --- these girl liter avers know their iness. They drag out the inpless while the mere man books on more helpless than every
