

657

(Start with voice)

RESTOCKING TYNE WITH TROUT.

At Wylam, Northumberland, they are busy restocking the River Tyne with trout. Containers are carried to the water's edge where the fish are released. Temperatures play an important part in this little game, The thermometer must show the same degree of heat/as the river, before the fish takes the final plunge. After all it isn't every trout that likes a cold bath.

FIRE EXTINGUISHER.

They are trying out a new fire extinguisher near Gateshead-on Tyne. Blazing oil and petrol are smothered with carbon di-oxide and it is said that the outbreak can be put out in seven seconds. ~~It seems that there is as much fire now as there was before.~~

GERT AND DAISY.

Our cameraman dropped in at a cooking class at in London and found Elsie and Doris Waters picking up a few hints on how to make tasty dishes for the home.