

ULSTER P.M.

The death of Lord Craigavon left vacant the office of Prime Minister in Northern Ireland. a position calling for an exceptional man in these difficult days . The Governorship is still held of course, by the Duke of Abercorn.... seen here with the Duchess in the gardens of Government House. The man selected to hold the office of Premier was Mr J.M. Andrews --- a man whose policy is unswerving loyalty to the Empire, finds inspiration in the Abernethy statue of Lord Carson --- Ulster's hero. In an interview with J.B.N., MR Andrews expressed his straightforward policy.

But Ulster believes in deeds ~~maximal words~~ to support words.

As proof of sincerity the Belfast barometer for War Weapons Week ~~shows~~ showed a million and a quarter collected in the first half hour. ~~That something Hitler will never beat except at the point of a gun.~~
