

DUKE AND DUCHESS OF KENT.

739

Warships of Britain and her allies, and their crews, were inspected by the Duke of Kent during a visit to one of the big naval dockyards. More and more it becomes evident in this war that the most vital part is played by the sea and the ships and the men who sail in them. All three are serving Britain to the utmost. And the Duchess of Kent ^{is visiting a Women's H.Q.} has a word to say about women's part in our sea power.
