

R.A.F. CADETS.

Every air-minded youth in Britain has a chance of becoming a pilot in the R.A.F. under the new air-cadet training scheme. University air squadrons, squadrons at schools and squadrons organized locally are being filled with the best type of our young manhood.... approximately 700,000 are eligible to take the oath

It's a scheme that's getting a move on; the call of adventure in a great cause is being answered nobly --- and more are coming in every day.

Each big city in the United Kingdom is playing its part; each town and village adds its quota to the effort for victory.

The R.A.F. cadet scheme wants boys with brains as well as brawn; men who've been through the mill --- ground staff and pilots too --- are the instructors for the most thrilling job in the world.

These cadets are a sight to gladden the heart. The R.A.F. and the Fleet Air Arm in 1940 have earned the admiration and respect of the whole world; the magnificent combination of ground staff and air crews has struck deadly blows at the enemies of Britain. This is to tell the world that there are plenty more to come for the Royal Air Force of to-morrow. These are the pilots who will be flying when the all clear sounds our victory.
