

NIGHT FIGHTERS ESTABLISH NEW RECORDS.

Britain is hitting hard at the night raider. Thanks to the brilliant work of our night fighters, at last it is becoming ~~quite~~ an expensive business for the Luftwaffe to drop bombs on this country in darkness.

It is no unusual thing for the number shot down to be in double figures. We cannot claim yet to have found the complete answer to the night bomber; but crashed machines all over the country testify to the growing success of the night patrols of Fighter Command. The procession of captured Nazi airmen to internment is a common sight at our stations; they too would bear witness, however reluctantly, to the skill of our defenders of the dark skies over Britain. This is one time when we really like to see a German - when he's out of action.
