

WAR SUPPLIES ARRIVE FROM AMERICA.

We begin our news this week with a story of the Battle of the Atlantic: the never-ending struggle to get the convoys of food and <sup>supplies</sup> ~~supplies~~ across the seas; and the pictures we have to show, demonstrate that the war supplies are coming through: our cameramen have visited the docks in many parts of the country. Americans are fulfilling their promise to supply us with war materials ~~and its a stream~~

~~that is growing faster every day.~~ (coming over in the ships; other ships are

Planes are coming over by ship and planes are bringing us tanks and guns and shells and the raw materials needed to build a mighty mechanized army. It's good to see the stuff unloading safely on British quays; it's better still to forget all about it and work as if we had to rely upon ourselves alone. Nothing less than our greatest effort will give us victory. Among the recent arrivals from the United States is a big bomber named the Spirit of Lockheed Vega Employees. This was a gift to Britain from workers in an American aircraft factory. It carries some big and beautiful bombs and the R.A.F. have guaranteed delivery
