DUTCH CELEBRATIONS.

In Britain and overseas, Dutch men and women are carrying on the struggle against the Germans who occupy their Mother Country. Prince Bernhardt and the Dutch Prime Minister took part in a world-wide broadcast from London's Regents' Park to celebrate the Netherlands Day of Freedom. Dutchmen in Holland, ~~in the Netherlands East Indies~~ <sup>and</sup> --- Dutchmen all over the world joined hands across space to pledge themselves to victory. ~~To them, "freedom" is more than just an overworked word.~~
FREE FRENCH SUBMARINE.

At a port somewhere in Britain; a Free French submarine, home from patrol. The little ship has been on duty with the Royal Navy since April 1940; in that time it has sunk several German vessels. On the last trip, they scored a hit with two torpedoes; they saw the Nazi vessel sink as a shadow through submerged portholes.
KING PETER INSPECTS A.A. DEFENCES.

King Peter of Jugo-Slavia paid a recent visit to an anti-aircraft site near London. He was accompanied by General Simovitch, the Jugo-Slav Prime Minister. Since the German armies overran Jugo-Slavia, news from that unhappy land has been scarce; all we know is that when the tide of battle turns in Europe, Jugo-Slavia will rise again --- and come out killing.
