

PENGUINS.

801?

These dear old ladies make a solemn entrance to the sunken garden at Rockefeller Centre, New York.

5 Well-known to those who sail the Southern Seas, penguins take life seriously. They love making a public appearance-- no stage fright for them. Even in their wild state, they're ~~quite~~ quite unafraid of human beings. There's never a dull moment when these lovely creatures walk about with easy abandon, elegant poise and grace. You'd think they'd be ~~used to wet~~ at home when it's wet, but they can flip and flop like a hen in a puddle.

~~And don't they remind us of another kind of hen party out for the afternoon?~~

FASHIONS.

2 In New York, they're showing the latest styles-- this is what the well-dressed American girl is going to ~~wear~~ box wear in the autumn. Do you fancy the long tweed/coat, or the natty short -fitted jacket? ~~They're~~ They're equally smart.

Then what about a costume of cashmere patchwork and one of velveteen? The hat matches the dress. Here's the velveteen, and here's the patchwork.

This autumn, they'll wear ~~long~~ dresses featuring the torso silhouette. They're right in the swim, and want to be admired.

But what do they find? A seal certainly doesn't appreciate a fashionable hat.