And the ships are coming across the sea; Northern Ireland has just received the largest contingent of American troops yet sent in this war; and Roosevelt has said that many more will be coming.

The latest arrivals included Women's Units --- and also some oranges --- incredible.

So the young men from Manhattan and the Middle West start coming ashore in the old World: and they bring their own rations in case we offer them cups of tea at four o'clock.

America has always been clearly on the side of Britain since war began: cash and carry supplies followed by Lease Land have been an enormous help in our darkest days: now she's in the shooting war and she means business. The sense of urgency is apparent in all the American war plans; they've got the urge to finish the war as quickly as possible --- and there's no better idea they could have. This really looks like the business.

These are the new steel helmets: ~~with~~ with attack in all our hearts and minds, it's a grand sight ~~to see~~ this long column on the march; let's have the same slogan --- finish Hitler in 1942.
