W.R.N.S. ASHORE AND AFLOAT.

Around the coast of Britain the Wrens are busy; and they don't confine their activities to dry land work in the shore establishments. This is a base where picketboats are manned by girls --- taking personnel from shore to ship --- carrying mail, stores and any other duty that comes along.

But there's a lot of land work to be done as well, and they march to it with smartness and swing, even if they haven't got a nautical roll.

Servicing automatic weapons and the important job of filling ammunition belts is just a part of the days work for the smart girls of the Navy.

Out across the world too, there are British Wrens. In the Mediterranean war zone you'll see them in trim tropical kit and very nice they look.

This is a camp where they can sleep and otherwise relax. Their work is done elsewhere --- ~~wherever they may be a job to do that would otherwise keep them on shore.~~
