

BUILDING THE NEW CHINESE ARMY.

Somewhere in India, a new Chinese army is being put through training. Man-power has never been one of China's problems --- weapons always have. But here the followers of Chiang Kai Shek are receiving instruction on modern weapons and when they go into action they'll have them to use.

Their Chief is the American General Stilwell who fought so gallantly with them in Burma. They're all looking forward to the chance of getting back at the Japanese on equal terms.

In China as in Russia, we have powerful Allies who are utterly determined not to give in to Axis aggressors: both need colossal figures in war equipment --- but any we can supply will be repaid a thousandfold in battles against our own enemies.
