ITALIANS RETURN FROM ABYSSINIA.

This is one of the cross roads of a world at war --- where even in the midst of war we have time to help the innocent and the helpless. They are Italians who had emigrated to Abyssinia; who since the reconquest of Ethiopia by the armies of the British Empire have been allowed to return to Italy. The old, the unfit and women and children have been granted passage; the fit men are kept in ~~camps~~ to prevent their return to join the armies of our enemies.

The Italians are Britain's enemies; we shall do our utmost to destroy them, and you're rather apt to feel at first that they went into Abyssinia without an invitation --- let them stay there; but we aren't making war on children; it's still right that babies should be cared for and protected, whatever their unfortunate nationality.
