THE FAR EAST FRONT --- PATROL ACTION IN BURMA.

These are the first pictures from Burma since troops of the British Empire began pushing the Japanese back on the Mayu Peninsular. It is the area of Akyab and Arakan; ~~the~~ Indian troops are sharing with Home Regiments the difficulties of ~~this~~ jungle war. These are the men who are doing the job of rejoining this important neighbour of India and China ~~---~~ and the Burma Police are already back at work ~~here~~. This theatre of war is yet another where the supply question is of supreme importance --- and such great difficulty ~~is~~.

While this film has been travelling to London from Burma our patrols have pushed further in and each side has increased its strength, but as yet there is no more than a fringe of battle in the reconquest of Burma. ~~Inspected amongst the scenery~~ Inspecting here is General Sir Allan Hartley, Field Marshal ~~the~~ Wavell's Deputy Commander ~~of~~

~~rolls~~
The Bren Carrier ~~is~~ along the shore that bounds the Bay of Bengal; patrol ~~is~~ And much work is also done here by mules; but as our men advance there is ~~constant~~ ~~in some best action~~ mopping up of snipers left behind by the Japanese ~~is~~

As the major battles to the west roll out their thunder, this is the second act of a great eastern drama. The star is that little man who got shoved around in the first act, but always refuses to be beaten.
