

WE DIVE AT DAWN PREMIERE.

979

(Special)

Submarines have been continuously in the news since the war began; first of all, mostly U-Boats; but for a long time now they have been our submarines which have come repeatedly into the headlines with a great score of killings against enemy sea-transport: war-supply ships and troopships have paid enormously~~x~~ toll to the men who serve the Royal Navy below the surface of the sea.

No group of men in any of the fighting services deserves a greater tribute for courage and coolness than the men of the submarines; that tribute is paid in this picture and by the audiences which go to see it.

Among those who were present at this premiere was ~~Lady Asquith, Mrs. Asquith~~ ^{who} Anthony Asquith directed "We Dive at Dawn." As usual, for a picture of this importance the audience was distinguished as well as large; you will recognize many in it who are shaping to-morrow's destiny.
