

CANADA SPEEDS UP TIMBER CROP.

Timber is a vital munition of war --- and like everything else it's none too easy to get. So the Canadian fir forests are working full out to produce something like two billion feet a year.

Some of these giants are five hundred years old; it makes you wonder who'll be fighting a war when the next crop comes down.

^ Floated downstream in the old Canadian lumber style, they're on their way to war. Perhaps in five hundred years time the world will have discovered how to do without wars; and how to do without timber.

420 P.M. J. V. Schuk.
16/11/43