

CADETS.

Royal Fusilier Cadets had a day out the other day, inspecting and handling weapons at an American camp. It's possible with British boys to teach them the principles of defending their country without the danger of turning them into machines of conquest; therefore the training discipline of the cadet corps should be valuable in peace, as well as war. What are they doing in those holes? Oh!

U.S. BOMBER BASE.

An American Bomber Base in Europe built by Negro Engineering Troops --- and a Technical Sergeant gets the Legion of Merit Medal for excellence in handling equipment and volunteering to do extra work. After the ceremony, a march past, led by the band. And to set the seal on a great day, the world's heavyweight champion arrives --- Sergeant Joe Louis

BRIGADIER MACLEAN.

A military mission from Yugo-Slavia, in London. Officers from Marshal Tito's Headquarters in the Balkans have come over for consultation. And also in London is that almost legendary figure from Yugo-Slavia --- the head of Britain's military mission --- Brigadier Maclean
