

THE WESTERN FRONT --- LAND AND AIR ACTIONS BY THE GERMAN BORDER.

Part of the close support given by Bomber Command of the Royal Air Force to the troops fighting on the ground. To assist the Canadians in their battle of the Leopold Canal, the dykes of the island of Walcheren were opened and the island flooded. This island is a strongpoint of heavy guns; after the first flooding Bomber Command went out again and silenced the guns that were still in action.

Now across to the Nancy sector, where the American Third Army is in action. Tanks and infantry pushing on to drive the Germans back into Germany; to kill and capture many of them on the way.

The next camera takes us into Germany itself; in the woods inside the frontier there is patrol activity; for the moment the spectacular advances have ceased; but there's still a lot of ~~good~~ good, solid work being ^{done;} ~~done;~~ wounded being taken back; prisoners being brought in.

Now --- Aachen; this great city has been called the Canterbury of Germany. The fighting for it has been bitter in the extreme; no question that the Huns are putting up a terrific battle. But at last they are doing their fighting in the their own homes; not in somebody else's. The Aachen command refused the offer of surrender; so the suffering of the Aachen people is the responsibility of their leaders. So will it be throughout Germany, if they decide to fight to a finish.
