

FUNERAL OF THE ARCHBISHOP.

2 Thus in the lovely old Cathedral of Canterbury were the last respects of men paid to Dr. William Temple, Archbishop of Canterbury.

~~Behind the coffin as it left were the Archbishop's wife, his daughter and his brother.~~

Dr Temple had held this highest office in the Church of England for two years only, but in that ~~time~~ time he had shown promise of being one of the great Primates. ~~That short time~~ He had won the respect and confidence of ordinary men and women. In spite of his exalted office, we had the feeling that he understood the problems of less important people. ~~It is usual on these occasions to say that his death will be felt as a great loss. This time it seems that it really may be true.~~

Behind the coffin as it left the Cathedral were the Archbishop's wife, his daughter and his brother.
