

Eclipse

Britain: What a summer! Everyone looking for the sun, and to crown it all, the moon decides to black it out - in the largest solar eclipse, seen in the country, since 1927.

Of course, some people forgot their smoked glasses and saw its reflection in the water.

Although it was not a total eclipse over the Capital, our camera, with its giant lens, took these spectacular pictures of its most intense phase

In the Far North, the eclipse was complete. But don't worry, we should see the sun again before the next black-out in 1999.

Sir Winston Churchill

Washington: During his American visit, Sir Winston Churchill was the guest of honour at a National Press Lunch - and opened his address in impish vein. SOUND.

~~During questions~~

The Premier ^{also} answered questions, ~~and~~ the first referred to his Quebec Conference with President Roosevelt, when a communique spoke of "blazing friendship between our two countries! What is the temperature of that friendship now, Sir Winston? SOUND.

Also Sir Winston's farewell to the President seems to suggest ^{a forecast of} ~~the~~ ~~President's~~ ~~policy~~ "set fair" ~~and~~.

(Cue on speaker)