

Germany: Already on order for sixteen countries, the Bristol "Britannia" turbo-prop airliner leads Britain's aerial challenge to world markets, as she arrives at Hamburg - on a six-day European Sales Drive.

Meanwhile, another British plane has found favour in Japan - the Vampire Jet Trainer - being demonstrated by test pilot George Errington. After the flight, the plane was officially handed over - to help the build-up of the newly-created Japanese Air Force.

Back home, the first squadrons of the Vickers Valiant four-jet medium bomber are in service with the R.A.F.

Leading the way in the build-up of our proposed atom-bomber fleet, the Valiant is the most powerful aircraft to enter R.A.F. Service. It's potential hitting power is greater than the whole of Bomber Command, at peak strength, in World War Two.
