

Arnhem Bridge: Yes, it's twelve years ~~■~~ since the Red Devils fought that heroic battle. But, once again, a solemn pilgrimage keeps faith with those who died - the men of the First Airborne Division.

Their mission was to hold the Rhine Bridge for the advancing Allied Armies - and so bring liberation to Holland, and a speedy end to the war. To-day, at the Airborne Memorial, Oosterbeek, Dutch Children pay tribute to their courage - for the "Men of Arnhem" lie among friends, ~~and~~ cherished and remembered.

^{Himself} survivor of the battle - General Sir Richard Gale pays tribute to fallen comrades.

Relatives, too, made the long journey from Britain to spend just a few minutes with ^{their heroic} loved ones, ^{whose} ~~who~~ ~~counted~~ ~~not~~ ~~the~~ ~~cost~~.

~~For days, the Red Devils held the bridge: but though their heroism was in vain - their ^{name} ~~name~~ liveth for evermore..~~
