

Naples Festival

Italy: The voice of Naples - so often raised in plaintive love-song - bids welcome to an age-old festival that lights the city with a carnival glow...

It's the annual procession to celebrate the Feast Day of the Virgin of Piedigrotta - whose ^{patronage} ~~sanctuary~~ has, for centuries past, renewed the faith of Neapolitans - and lent inspiration to their lilting serenades

Venezuela ore

From Venezuela comes a modern version of that old joke about having a job for life. There, the workers are slowly whittling away a ^{whole} mountain. It's Mount Bolivar, which contains about 65 per cent iron ore. So it's blasted away, bit by bit - to produce eleven million tons every year.

what you might call bit of work.
An ore-inspiring career ~~for any youngster.~~

[REDACTED SECTION]