General de Gaulle takes his new Constitution to the people.
150,000 Parisians gathered to hear the Prime Minister outline his draft proposals before they vote in the referendum that will decide the future of France.

After giving a victory salute - the General led his supporters in singing the Marseillaise. SOUND.

But already, there are signs that the new Constitution will meet strong opposition. During the meeting, Communist and Left-Wing groups staged counter-demonstrations
