PARATROOPS EN MASSE.

Pictures of airborne exercises carried out by British, Canadian and American Air Force and Parachute groups, give an idea of the big scale on which these operations are now carried out. Nothing previously screened of massed parachute jumps has come up to this. From Troop Carrier Command aircraft, hundreds of airborne invaders descend in one vast cloud.

Recently I visited one of the great centres where these men who wear the airborne wings on their tunics receive their training. It was very obvious that they have more than the requisite amount of intestinal fortitude. To coin a phrase - they've got guts.
