

2-275001
44-40

U. BOAT OFFENSIVE FAILS,

Unlike railway marshalling yards in Europe, those in North America are free from Air Attack. Its an impressive sight to see the thousands of tons of supplies slung from quaysides into the holds of waiting merchant ships. Some of the resources behind the Allied invasion plans.

The men who bring these gigantic cargoes, travel the Atlantic shipping lanes in convoy. Though the submarine menace has declined, and danger now stalks the U.Boats, threats of torpedo attack have still to be met. But the hunting sub becomes the hunted and another coast-going U-boat falls victim to the Allied Patrol.

Allied shipping losses versus U)boat sinkings weigh heavily in our favour - - -one more losing battle for Germans to weep over.