WARTIME SECRET REVEALED

Saldanha Bay, sixty-three miles north of Cape Town. South Africa's brand new harbour. In one of the world's most magnificent land locked bays, work went on throughout the war under a security blanket. Now, with the need for secrecy gone, we take our first look at the new Saldanha. Vast minefields were laid to keep out prying U-boats and one of the first post war jobs in this part of the world is to get the harbour clear - - - - - the quick way.

Saldanha Bay - - - - - South Africa's war baby, is tipped for a great future.
